OMNI v. eFinancial

Plaintiff Is Entitled To Injunctive Relief Under The Act.

Defendants pretend that there is something unusual or novel about Plaintiff's request that the Court grant a permanent injunction to enforce a statute restricting their unwanted commercial speech in the form of spam directed towards the Plaintiff at the preliminary stages of the case. Nothing could be further from the truth. Congress and the States routinely enact statutes restricting unwanted speech, both commercial and non-commercial, and the Courts, including the Supreme Court, routinely issue and enforce permanent injunctions enjoining future violations of those prohibitions.

In Madsen v. Women's Health Center, Inc., 512 U.S. 753 (1994) the Supreme Court considered a case where a state court permanently enjoined petitioners from blocking or interfering with public access to a Florida abortion clinic when petitioners and other antiabortion protesters merely threatened to picket and demonstrate around the clinic. Later, when the petitioners made good on their threats, and the court issued an amended permanent injunction which, inter alia, restricted the use of "images observable" by patients inside the clinic and created a 300 foot buffer zone around the residences of clinic staff. The Supreme Court upheld the injunction.

In the Madsen case, the "damages" caused by the restricted speech were presumed by the statute. The challenge brought by the petitioners was based on a claimed violation of their 5th amendment rights, but the "damages" were never in doubt. The same is true here. By explicitly

1 requiring that Defendants stop sending further spam after they have been asked, Congress has 2 recognized that the receipt of unwanted spam, in and of itself, inherently "damages" the 3 recipient. No further showing under general principles of equity is necessary, because the Act 4 itself defines the conduct as impermissible. By explicitly making injunctive relief available to 5 prohibit Defendants from sending further spam after they have been asked to stop, Congress has 6 recognized that forcing a Plaintiff to receive unwanted spam after that request is, in and of itself, 7 a wrong that has no adequate remedy at law. Thus, no further showing under general principles 8 of equity is required, because the Act itself explicitly authorizes the relief sought.

9 Defendants claim, incredibly, that general principles of equity give them the right to 10 avoid injunctive relief, and thus the right to continue to send Plaintiff spam indefinitely, despite 11 their receipt of Plaintiff's request asking them to stop. Defendants further claim that general 12 principles of equity require that until and unless Plaintiff can quantify how the ongoing receipt of 13 their spam monetarily "damages" the Defendants, that the explicit statutory prohibition against 14 them sending it cannot be enforced. If the Court accepts this line of reasoning, then the entire 15 prohibition against sending a recipient unwanted spam after a party has been asked to stop under 16 15 USC 7704(a)(4) becomes meaningless. If the prohibition against sending this spam itself is 17 not sufficient to trigger the availability of injunctive relief, then the explicit remedy of injunctive 18 relief set forth in the Act becomes an illusion.

20 The Court has a choice. It can eviscerate the CAN SPAM Act's prohibition against 21 sending spam to someone who doesn't want it, and who has requested not to receive it, or it can

1 effectuate the explicit purpose of the Act. The Act explicitly says that a person is not permitted
2 to send spam to another after they have been asked to stop. 15 USC 7704(a)(4). If they won't 3 stop sending spam, the Act explicitly authorizes injunctive relief to make them stop. 15 USC 4 7706(g)(1). In authorizing injunctive relief, the Act makes no reference to general principles of 5 equity. Accordingly, the Defendant's reliance on eBay Inc v. MercExchange, L.L.C., 126 S. Ct.
6 1837 (2006) is misplaced.

7 In eBay, the Court considered an injunction under the Patent Act, specifically 15 USC § 8 283. As the Court noted, Congress explicitly incorporated the general principles of equity into 9 the text of the Patent Act. The Court states: "the Patent Act expressly provides that injunctions 10 'may' issue 'in accordance with the principles of equity.' 35 U. S. C. §283." eBay at n.2. No such 11 reference to general principles of equity exists in the CAN SPAM Act, and thus the Act is readily 12 distinguished from both the Patent Act and the Supreme Court's holding in eBay Inc v.
13 MercExchange, L.L.C. because the statute at issue in the present case doesn't require that general 14 principles of equity apply to the injunctive relief authorized under the Act. The Court should 15 therefore enforce the injunctive relief specifically authorized in the Act without applying the 16 additional requirements set forth by general principles of equity.

18 Defendants claim that they are no longer sending spam to Plaintiff. Plaintiff disagrees, 19 but even if Defendant's claim was true, it would not stop the Court from entering a permanent 20 injunction prohibiting future violations.

"Along with its power to hear the case, the court's power to grant injunctive relief survives discontinuance of the illegal conduct. Hecht Co. v. Bowles, supra; Goshen Mfg. Co. v. Myers Mfg. Co., 242 U.S. 202 (1916). The purpose of an injunction is to prevent future violations, Swift & Co. v. United States, 276 U.S. 311, 326 (1928), and, of course, it can be utilized even without a showing of past wrongs. But the moving party must satisfy the court that relief is needed. The necessary determination is that there exists some cognizable danger of recurrent violation, something more than the mere possibility which serves to keep the case alive. United States v. W. T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 633 (1953).

It is plain that much more than the "mere possibility" of "recurrent violations" is present. The fact is that actual incidents of "recurrent violations" are ongoing. See Declaration of James S. Gordon, Jr.

Plaintiff Satisfies The Elements For Equitable Injunctive Relief.

Even if the Court applies the equitable principles of eBay Inc v. MercExchange, L.L.C., the Plaintiff is still entitled to equitable relief. It is disingenuous in the extreme for Defendants to argue that Plaintiffs cannot show "irreparable harm". The Act itself is founded upon the assumption that the receipt of unwanted commercial email adversely affects recipients such as Plaintiffs, and the mandate to stop such unwanted email. Plainly, that is the fundamental purpose and intent of the Act. To interpret the Act in any other way would be to thwart the will of Congress, and would effectively eviscerate the Act. Nonetheless, Defendants essentially argue that because Gordon has brought other lawsuits of this type to enforce the Act, and because he has realized financial gain through settlements as a result of bringing those lawsuits, he is somehow beyond suffering irreparable harm. To the contrary, a reading of the Gordon

1 Declarations makes it perfectly clear that he has, and continues to be substantially and 2 irreparably harmed by the receipt of unwanted commercial email sent by or on behalf of 3 Defendants and others.

4 Defendants argument is more than somewhat hypocritical to the extent they contend that 5 Plaintiffs' remedy at law is adequate, while on the other hand chastising Plaintiffs for actually 6 realizing on that remedy, ie., monetary damages. Obviously, no remedy is the only remedy 7 Defendants would have this Court award. Nonetheless, Gordon has made it clear that he has 8 brought this and other lawsuits, not for monetary damages, but to stop the incessant flow of 9 spam. And, for that, the monetary damages created by the statutory penalties, and any financial 10 gain realized therefrom, is clearly inadequate.

11 Regarding the balance of hardships between the parties here, there can be no credible 12 argument in favor of allowing Defendants to send their unwanted spam unfettered. The Act 13 itself makes clear that the receipt of unwanted spam is the core conduct the Act addresses. There 14 is no inalienable right provided to Defendants or anyone else to send unwanted emails. Thus, the 15 balance of hardships clearly weights heavily in favor of Plaintiffs here. To ask Defendants to 16 stop sending spam doesn't require them to do anything. It merely asks that they refrain from 17 further unlawful actions.

19 Lastly, whether the public interest would be disserved by the granting of a permanent 20 injunction, there can be no serious dispute about that here. The very essence of the Act is 21 premised upon the widely acknowledged harm to society in general, and the economy

specifically caused by the scourge of unwanted commercial email "spam." There is no credible argument whatsoever that the public's interest is somehow served by forcing people such as Plaintiff to receive unwanted spam. Accordingly, the only thing remaining to be done is for the Court to enforce the Act and effectuate the true purpose and intent of the Act, by protecting "recipients" from unwanted commercial email.

Collateral Estoppel Does Not Apply As Plaintiff Did Not Previously Have The Opportunity To Fully Litigate The Issue Of Standing.

Defendant's argument that Plaintiffs standing is barred by collateral estoppel from the Court's ruling in Gordon v. Virtumundo fails. "Collateral estoppel" or "offensive nonmutual issue preclusion" prevents a party from relitigating an issue that the party has litigated and lost. See Catholic Social Servs., Inc. v. I.N.S., 232 F.3d 1139, 1152 (9th Cir. 2000). In the Ninth Circuit, the application of "offensive nonmutual issue preclusion" is appropriate if, inter alia, there was a "full and fair opportunity to litigate the identical issue in the prior action", see Fund for Animals, Inc. v. Lujan, 962 F.2d 1391, 1399 (9th Cir. 1992); Resolution Trust Corp. v. Keating, 186 F.3d 1110, 1114 (9th Cir. 1999); Appling v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co., 340 F.3d 769, 775 (9th Cir. 2003). In Gordon v. Virtumundo, Plaintiff was never given the opportunity to litigate the relevant issues.

OMNI v. eFinancial

1 Contrary to Defendant's assertions, in the Gordon v. Virtumundo ruling, the Court did in 2 fact hold that Gordon was an "Internet Access Service," which is specifically authorized to bring 3 claims, under the Act. Applying the statutory definition, the Court stated: "Nevertheless, it is 4 fairly clear that Plaintiffs are, in the most general terms, a "service that enables users to access"
5 Internet content and e-mail, and accordingly, they qualify as an IAS under the statute's capacious
6 definition." (Cause No. CV06-0204JCC, Court's May 15, 2007 Order, Dkt. 121, pg. 13, lines 10-7 12) The Court also agreed that Gordon had suffered an "adverse impact" as required by the Act.
8 However, the Court nevertheless denied Gordon standing.

9 The Court's rationale for denying standing required the Court to reach into the legislative 10 history to make a determination that Congress intended something more than an "adverse 11 impact." The Court concluded that Gordon was required to show "ISP- or IAS-specific 12 burdens," that these burdens be "significant", and held that Gordon had not done so. (Cause No.
13 CV06-0204JCC, Court's May 15, 2007 Order, Dkt. 121, pg. 13, lines 12-13). However, Gordon 14 had no way of knowing that he would be required to show that he was required to show "ISP- or 15 IAS-specific burdens" and that these burdens had to be "significant" until after the Court issued 16 its order. Accordingly, Gordon never had a "full and fair opportunity to litigate the identical 17 issue in the prior action" because the standard adopted by the Court did not exist until after all 18 briefing was completed. Indeed, Gordon has never, until this motion, had the opportunity to 19 submit any evidence or brief the issues raised by the Court's order, because the Court's order

1 dismissed Gordon's case using a standard that was articulated for the very first time in the order 2 itself.

3 Applying the test articulated by the Court in Gordon v. Virtumundo, it is clear from 4 Gordon's declaration in the present case that he has shown "ISP- or IAS-specific burdens" and 5 that these burdens were "significant." Among other things, Gordon has been forced to upgrade 6 his servers as a result of spam, he has been forced to install additional software, and all of this 7 came at great expense to a small Internet Access Service operated by an individual. Everyday 8 email users do not have their own servers, and they do not have to spend additional money to 9 upgrade those servers as a result of spam. Thus, Gordon's damages are therefore clearly "ISP- or 10 IAS-specific burdens" and the attendant cost of these burdens was "significant."

11 12 Summary Judgment There is No Issue of Material Fact As To the Claim Asserted by 13 Plaintiff Here.
14

15 Plaintiffs have established that there is no issue of material fact in dispute with regard to 16 the simple issue presented by this Motion. That is, whether Plaintiffs, as "recipients", requested 17 that Defendants not send commercial emails to them, and whether, after 10 days subsequent to 18 that request Defendants did send commercial emails to Plaintiffs. If so, Defendants have 19 violated 15 USC § 7704 (a)(4)(A) , the analysis ends, and Plaintiff is entitled to the relief sought 20 in this Motion as a matter of law. The Declarations of James S. Gordon, Jr. submitted in support 21 of this Motion clearly establish that Gordon, both individually, and on behalf of Omni, did

1 request (in fact numerous times) that Defendants not send commercial emails to his email
2 addresses and domains, and further that after 10 days subsequent to those requests Defendants 3 did send commercial emails to the relevant addresses and domains. In fact, Gordon's reply 4 declaration establishes that, even after the filing of this very Motion, contrary to their 5 unsubstantiated, self-serving assertions in their Response, and in complete disregard of the Act's 6 prohibition, Defendants brazenly continue to send the unwanted emails. (See Gordon 7 Declaration in Reply).

8 Defendants further argue, with no evidentiary support whatsoever, that Gordon may have 9 given subsequent affirmative assent to receive their emails, and that discovery may yield such 10 evidence. However, Gordon unequivocally denies such an assertion, and Defendants have 11 submitted no evidence to support such a claim. Presumably, if Gordon did in fact give 12 subsequent affirmative assent to Defendants, Defendants would possess such evidence and 13 would have submitted it to the Court. Conspicuously, no such evidence has been offered.
14 Accordingly, the Court should accept Gordon's statements in this regard as having been 15 established for purposes of summary judgment.
16

17 Plaintiff's motion is only for partial summary judgment. As such, Plaintiff is not required 18 to meet the heightened burden imposed upon them to prove all of the elements of all of their 19 claims here. That is, Plaintiff's do not have to prove that Defendants sent or acted in concert 20 with others to send commercial emails that violate the Act's substantive provisions, ie., 21 containing false or misleading information in the email headers. Plaintiffs need not establish

1 those other violations as they are not relevant to the clear, unambiguous language of the Act 2 specifically prohibiting the conduct complained of on the part of Defendants, ie., sending of 3 commercial email subsequent to 10 days following a request that they stop. Even if the 4 Defendants spam complies in all material ways with the statute, (ie. all the headers and subject 5 lines are not false and misleading), it still violates the statute if Defendants continue to send it 6 after a request has been made that they stop.

7 Finally, Defendants claim that Plaintiff cannot meet the Summary Judgment standard 8 because there are material facts in dispute. Specifically, Defendants claim that they have not 9 continued to send spam to Gordon, that there is “no evidence” linking them that the spam is 10 connected to Defendants, that Gordon doesn’t have “standing” to request that they stop 11 spamming two domains of the domains hosted on Gordon’s server, that Omni did not become an 12 internet access service until May of 2005, and that there is no evidence that the addresses to 13 which Gordon sent his requests that Defendants stop sending him spam where in fact associated 14 with Defendants.
15

16 Exhibit “A” to the Declaration of James S. Gordon Jr. filed herewith is a copy of a recent 17 spam sent from or on behalf of Defendants on June 5, 2007. At the time it was received, Mr.
18 Gordon clicked on the hyperlink in the email and his browser opened to the eFinancial website.
19 Exhibit “B” is a copy of eFinancial’s website, to which the spam email resolved. Plainly, the 20 claim that neither Defendants nor their agents are sending Gordon spam is not supported by the 21 factual record.

OMNI v. eFinancial

1 Defendant's claim the Omni doesn't have "standing" to request that the Defendants not 2 send spam to domains owned by others, but hosted on Omni's website, is absurd. As Defendant
 3 well knows, individuals cannot bring actions under CAN SPAM. Thus, the ONLY protection 4 any customer of Omni's Interactive Computer Service has is if Omni acts on their behalf. In any 5 event, since these third party domains are hosted on Omni's server, the spam emails sent by 6 Defendant to these third party domains is directed to Omni's server. Omni most certainly has 7 "standing" to complain about email sent to Omni's server.

8 Defendants contend that Omni did not become an internet access service until May of 9 2005. This is simply not relevant to either the question of whether Defendants are continuing to 10 spam Omni, or whether Omni has asked Defendants to stop. The emails at issue are ones sent 11 recently, and more importantly, ones that will be sent in the future, unless Defendant's conduct is 12 enjoined.

13 Finally, Defendants make a hyper-technical argument that Plaintiff may not have 14 "properly" unsubscribed because Defendant's content there is no evidence that the addresses to 15 which Gordon sent his requests that Defendants stop sending him spam where in fact associated 16 with Defendants. This is simply not true. The CAN SPAM Act plainly provides that Plaintiff 17 can opt out using any mechanism Defendant provides in their email. 15 USC 7704(a)(3)(A) 18 states:

20 It is unlawful for any person to initiate the transmission to a protected computer of a 21 commercial electronic mail message that does not contain a functioning return electronic

1 mail address or other Internet-based mechanism, clearly and conspicuously displayed, 2 that –

3 (i) a recipient may use to submit, in a manner specified in the message, a reply
4 electronic mail message or other form of Internet-based communication 5 requesting not to receive future commercial electronic mail messages from that 6 sender at the electronic mail address where the message was received;

7 In this case, Omni plainly sent its request not to receive future spam using the return 8 email address provided by the emails sent by or on behalf of the Defendant, which is a 9 mechanism explicitly authorized in the Act.

10 However, the Court should not engage in this sophistry. The Court should end all of 11 these types of factual disputes by recognizing the clear Congressional intent, and holding that 12 regardless of how someone requests to be left alone, as is the case here, if there is clear and 13 indisputable evidence that the request was made, and there is clear and indisputable evidence that 14 the sender of the email had actual notice of the request, then a spammer must honor that request 15 and leave the requesting party alone and not hide behind the hyper-technical defense that the 16 request wasn't made in the proper manner. If it is indisputable that a spammer knows that a 17 party wants to be left alone, as is the case here, then the spammer ought to be held to leave that 18 party alone.
